Rikomagic MK802 iV / 8G(B) PC on a stick
Ligt hier al een tijdje ongebruikt, kan dus wel weg.

Gegevens van internet:
The MK802 series are mini computers the size of a usb key running Android, that connect to your TV with an HDMI cable.
This turns your TV into a smart TV for a minimal cost and at an extremely low power consumption. These Mini PCs can be used as HD Media Players, retro gaming consoles, bittorrent clients, ftp server inside your house, etc…
Rikomagic launched the trend last year with the MK802, a tiny device which, for less than $100, brought Android to your TV and could make it a smart TV out of the box. Many copycats followed, and these Mini PCs have since then improved in performance. The MK802 III released last year, with its Dual core CPU, made a huge difference, and turned what was just a funny geek trend into one of the best set top boxes out there.
This month, Rikomagic released a new revision of their box, the MK802 IV.

The device packs a quad-core CPU, 2 GB of DDR3, and a Mali GPU, the same that can be found in all the MK802 devices so far. Full specifications of the MK802 IV below:
