Working Siemens Marathon NT 911 GSM from the early nineties.
 complete with the original adapter.

The NT 911 Marathon is a combined voice and data terminal for the NMT 900 network (implemented in the Netherlands as ATF-3).
 It is the first phone released by Siemens for NMT 900.
 However, the actual producer is not Siemens itself, but the Swedish company Spectronic, specialized in high-tech electronics, which gave the device the name TS220.

Spectronic itself says over the phone:

The development of the first handheld mobile telephone for the NMT network, the Spectronic TS200, started in 1985. When it was launched four years later, the telephone quickly assumed a position of technical leadership. Its successor, the Spectronic Data Telephone TS220, with an integrated digital data terminal, was the first mobile telephone to enable simultaneous communication in speech, text and data
