Hieronder een korte beschrijving van de EVO:

The sensations of the EVO (four or five lines to choose from) in 7m2 are a copy/paste of those of the 10m2 but with a little more liveliness. The wing can offer you different sensations thanks to the two possible adjustments at ear level. With the "light bar pressure" setting, you have a wing that weighs nothing in your arms and requires you to already have some technical background. With the "medium bar pressure" setting, with bar action equivalent to the light setting, the EVO turns more slowly. It is also more predictable and more tolerant, an appreciable quality for riders coming out of training or those in full progress. Its movement speed is relatively high which makes it very playful. On the other hand, as soon as it accelerates, it quickly traces its route on the edge of the window. This may come as a surprise when you surf in onshore conditions, you really have to anticipate the wing movements to avoid being overtaken. When you have taken your bearings, the EVO is placed where you want it, so the placements on the wave are precise. In side or side off condition, the wing stalls and all you have to do is concentrate on your trajectories. When jumping, being responsive and very manoeuvrable, this 7m2 catapults you high, even very high when you ride with a good sail. In the air, its lift is really very good for a wing of this size. If you are more unhooked freestyle, the EVO offers a toned pop after the hook with a lot of amplitude. By setting the kite with the most pressure in the bar, hand placement errors are fairly well tolerated. In the event of a fall, the wing takes off again effortlessly. Question kiteman, it rocks as it should. Less difficult in travel, the EVO is a kite that will be a pleasure to fly. In summary, the 7m2 EVO is a kite that is easy to use, this 7m2 always remains a good kite. In summary, the 7m2 EVO is a kite that is easy to use, this 7m2 always remains a good kite.
