Ferrari 125cc single-cylinder two-stroke painted in red and white. The latter only lasted for the duration of the show but nevertheless succeeded in achieving the desired publicity and orders. Of course, what was on offer was not the product of Enzo Ferrari but Fratelli Ferrari, two brothers who happened to share his surname, a not at all uncommon one in Italy. Enzo Ferrari was not best pleased. The motorcycle itself was a typical Italian lightweight of the era, boasting a simple tubular frame, telescopic front forks and friction damped, torsion bar rear suspension. Today genuine Fratelli Ferrari motorcycles are extremely rare and highly prized by discerning collectors, particularly those that already have one of their four-wheeled namesakes in the garage.
